

unrequited

you tell me i'm wasting my time feeling sad and blue i'll tell you i'm wasting my time trying to get over you on a highway of diamonds i drive and i search for a clue but the map is all wrong and all the signs lead straight back to you

i'm waiting
waiting for you
i don't quite know why won't somebody please tell me why i do tell me to go out and find somebody new i'll tell i've only ever once felt feelings feel the way these one's do these feelings were showered with your sunshine and then they grew like a flower i'm patiently waiting for your morning dew

my heart's uninvited i feel undelighted
this love is unrequited so i sit here alone and in my hand is a brew it's cold and it's hard and i'd much rather hold on to you good things to those who wait well my waiting days are through i know now that i'd be a fool to wait in your queue
